Hello Mira Mesa Neighbors!

Lunar New Year festivities are in full swing both in our District and across the City - and my family, staff, and I have truly enjoyed partaking in these many celebrations this time of year alongside our community!

Our office was especially honored to celebrate Lunar New Year at San Diego City Hall. Joined by local API community leaders and the organizers of many of our region's Lunar New Year festivities, the City Council proclaimed February 10th through the Lantern Festival Day of February 25th as "Lunar New Year Week" in San Diego.

Thank you to everyone who organized and attDistrict ended the San Diego Tết Festival at Mira Mesa Community Park this past weekend! Our office had the pleasure of hosting a 6 booth all three days of the festival to meet constituents, answer any questions, and offer Tết-related crafts to families. Thank you again to everyone who stopped by to enjoy one of our region's many Lunar New Year festivities—and Chúc Mừng Năm Mới!

I want to also acknowledge that despite this past month being one full of celebrations for many families – this has also been an especially challenging time for many of our fellow San Diegans whose lives were changed forever by the floods on January 22nd .

As these San Diego families have been forced to be resilient in ways they never should have been, it is clear that our City has much continued work to do in order to support families as they rebuild as well as to invest in much-needed stormwater infrastructure. I also want to express my heartfelt gratitude to all the first responders, City crews, and numerous volunteers who acted quickly to help their fellow San Diegans in need.

A special thank you to Mira Mesa Town Council President Bari Vaz for teaming up with our office and numerous other community volunteers as we supported San Diego residents impacted by the recent flooding.

Stay safe, Councilmember Kent Lee

As always, if you have any concerns our office can help you with, please feel free to contact me or my Mira Mesa representative, Jermaine Rocacorba, at JRocacorba@sandiego.gov.

Meet Chhovy Chhit, Senior Cook at MMHS

When students at Mira Mesa High School encounter Senior Cook Chhovy Chhit on their busy lunch break, they're guaranteed to be greeted by her renowned warmth and vivacious personality.

It's Chhovy's passion for her job that has forged her trajectory in the San Diego Unified School District's Food and Nutrition Department over the last 18 years, seeing her advance from volunteer to Senior Cook.

As her supervisor, David Beane explains: "Chhovy always wants to do what's best for the kids and truly wants them to enjoy the food that they're eating. She has been assisting as a TOC Supervisor in the past and deserves to be recognized for her efforts that she brings every day to work. She is a leader that involves everyone on the floor to be working as a team."

But few of those students, their parents, and even other school staff, would probably know that behind Chhovy's smile lies a story worthy of a movie script. Born in Cambodia in 1970 to an affluent family, Chhovy's life dramatically changed when the Khmer Rouge took power, which resulted in what became known as the Cambodian Genocide.

Starting a Life in France

Chhovy was just five years old. "I remember our home," she says, sadly. "But they chased us away from our house, and my family lost everything." The family eventually fled to Thailand, where they lived until she was 9, and then life took another turn. "Before the war, my parents had sent my older brother to study engineering in France," she explains, "and he was able to sponsor us to move to Paris."

Chhovy's family spoke no French but they settled in Paris, where they remain today. Chhovy has fond memories of working on the Lancôme cosmetics counter at the legendary Parisian department store Printemps, where she loved interacting with customers and got a thrill from selling the products.

When she was 20, her parents planned an arranged marriage for her, as was Cambodian custom. But Chhovy's now husband of 31 years, John, had other plans.

Her brother's best friend at the time, John, went to Chhovy's father and asked to marry her. "We had known each other for so long, and once you're in love nothing else matters," Chhovy recalls, laughing.
The newlyweds moved to America when Chhovy was 22, and ended up in San Diego as John pursued a career in the Navy. They had two sons, William, now 25, and Edward, now 22.

Building a Career in School Nutrition

Chhovy began volunteering in William's kindergarten classroom at Hage Elementary School and would stay during lunchtime to help out. She loved every minute and would even load the food truck for field trips.

To her astonishment and delight, at Christmas time the school secretary gave her an envelope containing $300 cash that teachers had collected to thank her for all her help.

Chhovy spent the next two years working at Mira Mesa High School selling snacks and lunch on carts around campus. "It took me back to Lancôme," she says. "I didn't realize I missed it. I was the best seller and I was dancing at my cart. I sold $200-300 of food in 30 minutes!" She spent the next ten years at Ericson Elementary as Senior Food Service Site Leader before returning to Mira Mesa High, where she eventually became the Senior Cook. Her ambition is to be a Supervisor, a role she's already substituted in.

Chhovy credits her mom for her love of cooking. "We had a big family. We never went out but cooked for every occasion. I was always my mom's assistant," she remembers. "I love to cook. I love to eat. Food makes people happy." Today, Chhovy leads a team of 13 at Mira Mesa High and supervises seven food carts. She loves interacting with students and encouraging them to try the new rotating Manager Specials. "We have a menu so kids know what's coming," she explains. "I tell them 'I tried it, the Supervisor and Area Manager tried it'. And I tell my team, 'Let me know what kids feel about it, tell them I love to hear from them'."

A good leader, says Chhovy, "can predict a problem. You need to be positive and lead by example. Show and explain how you solve the problem. It's important to be patient with your team, and always compliment them."

Reflecting back on her own childhood, Chhovy remembers receiving free school lunches provided by the French government for low-income families, and she speaks warmly of California doing the same. "When I was at Ericson Elementary, I felt it. I could relate."

It's what drives her personal mission to make sure every child has enough food to grow and thrive. "I make sure every lunch has the same amount, there's no one that has less," she says. "I'm so passionate about my job and feeding children. Kids need nutrition to grow their brain. Sometimes I feel like their mom. They say, 'Are you my mom?' and I say, 'Well, I have to be sometimes if you guys don't eat!'"

News from Senator Brian Jones

Jones calls Panera Bread's exemption to minimum wage law "Crony Capitalism"

Sacramento, CA - Senate Minority Leader Brian W. Jones (R-San Diego) issued the following statement in response to news reports that Panera Bread was exempted from California's new $20-an-hour minimum wage hike for fast food chains because of their franchise owner's connections and campaign contributions to Governor Newsom:

"Panera couldn't afford Democrat lawmakers' $20 minimum wage requirement for fast food restaurants. Lucky for them, their franchise owner donated over $160,000 to Governor Newsom, who got them an exemption. Unfortunately, other restaurants lacked such substantial donations and now must comply with the new minimum wage by all means necessary, including layoffs and replacing workers with automation.

"Campaign contributions should not buy you carve-outs in legislation. This isn't 'sausage making' as the governor suggests, it's crony capitalism. Corrupt and UNACCEPTABLE."

Jones and all Senate Republicans opposed the measure, AB 1228, which led to this minimum wage hike in it's entirety in 2023. In a further effort to stop the assault on California employers, Sen. Brian Dahle (R-Bieber) even made a formal request to the governor to veto the legislation.

San Diego to Receive $29.9 Million to Address Homelessness

The state of California's Homeless Housing, Assistance and Prevention Program (HHAP) grant program is critical to our work helping people get off the street and into shelters and housing.

I'm grateful to Gov. Gavin Newsom and the State Legislature for recognizing the value of San Diego's homelessness programs by allocating the largest-ever HHAP award to the City this year — $29.9 million to support our shelter, outreach and housing programs.

We're proposing using $4.5 million of the grant for existing prevention and shelter diversion programs; $17.4 million for interim housing options; and $3 million for street outreach. An additional nearly $3 million would fund interim housing for youth.

This year's allocation will help us continue to shelter thousands of San Diegans as we work to end their homelessness and prevent others from falling into it.

The previous round of HHAP funding saw $22.5 million allocated for the City's homelessness response.

Since 2018, the City has relied on these grants for a significant increase in City-funded homeless services. That includes shelter bed expansion, safe parking programs, outreach and rapid-rehousing programs — among others.

California's big cities have funded nearly 16,000 beds with HHAP dollars, including 1,700 in San Diego. The California Big City Mayors, a bipartisan coalition of mayors across California's 13 largest cities that I currently chair, has made advocating for ongoing, permanent funding for HHAP our top priority.

This would enable cities to make longer-term plans knowing we can depend on this crucial funding to both prevent and end homelessness.

Homeless Housing, Assistance and Prevention (HHAP) Grant Program

Dear Friend,

I'm on my way back to Washington, D.C. after a packed week in San Diego and wanted to send a quick update on what I've been up to – from hosting a roundtable with community leaders that empower and support Black youth in honor of Black History Month to visiting the Port at Long Beach.

As you may know, this Friday (March 1st) is one of House Republicans' two self-imposed government shutdown deadlines. If House Republicans fail to pass a budget, food safety inspections will stop, paychecks will be delayed for some federal employees, essential food programs like SNAP and WIC may be cut off, veterans programs and federal loan housing support will be disrupted, and so much more. A partial government shutdown would also cost our country billions of dollars.

I'm doing everything I can to ensure that we honor the bipartisan and bicameral funding agreement that was made months ago – so that we can keep the government open and keep the programs going that millions of Americans rely on.

Helping Our Community Recover From the January Storms:

San Diegans never cease to amaze me, and I'm so proud of how our community has come together to recover from the January storm and flooding damage. Over the weekend, I joined 200 amazing volunteers at the San Diego River Park Foundation's storm cleanup to help clear out the San Diego Riverbed.

I'm also proud to have secured federal assistance to help San Diegans get back on their feet as soon as possible. If there's damage to your home, business, or property from the January storm, or if you've suffered any other related losses, apply for FEMA assistance with these resources:

SUPERVISOR LAWSON-REMER & BOARD DIRECT FUNDS TO INCREASE MENTAL HEALTH WORKER CAPACITY, ADVANCE SB 43 AND BUILD MORE AFFORDABLE HOUSING:

SAN DIEGO (FEBRUARY 27, 2024) – Supervisor Terra Lawson-Remer has pushed for the County of San Diego to move with greater urgency when implementing the SB 43 conservatorship law, building affordable housing, and increasing local capacity for behavioral health workers; and today $35.6 million in leftover COVID-19 stimulus money was directed toward these initiatives.

The breakdown of the funding Supervisor Terra Lawson-Remer and her colleagues allocated is as follows:

- $15 million for the implementation of the SB 43 program,
- $10 million in expanding San Diego's Behavioral Health Workforce,
- $10.6 million in the Innovative Housing Trust Fund, and
- Upon availability of funding, direct up to $10 million to support natural disaster relief.

In January, Supervisor Lawson-Remer introduced a policy to address these areas, and her proposals involving more recuperative care beds and supporting County workers was immediately approved, but her policy to increase behavioral health workers in the region was designated for review – and passed – at the February 27 meeting.

"Investing these dollars into the long-term success of SB 43 and the expansion of our behavioral health workforce was the right way to leverage these funds," said Supervisor Lawson-Remer, Vice Chair of the Board of Supervisors. "We will now also be able to act with greater urgency to address rising housing costs. The Board made the right decisions today."

International Women's Day

By Kaanchan S Farkiya

International Women's Day (IWD) is a global observance celebrated annually on March 8. It is a day dedicated to recognizing and celebrating the social, economic, cultural, and political achievements of women worldwide. Additionally, International Women's Day serves as a platform to raise awareness about the challenges and issues that women continue to face, promoting gender equality and advocating for women's rights. Each year, International Women's Day has a specific theme that focuses on a relevant issue. Themes often address topics like gender equality, women's empowerment, violence against women, and more. These themes guide the events and discussions that take place around the world.

The day is not only a celebration but also a call to action. It encourages individuals and organizations to take concrete steps toward achieving gender equality and challenging stereotypes. Wear purple if you want as purple is often associated with International Women's Day. It symbolizes justice and dignity, and you'll often see people wearing purple or incorporating the color into decorations and materials for events. Remember, the key is to celebrate women's achievements, raise awareness about gender inequality, and work towards a more inclusive and equitable future. International Women's Day is a crucial opportunity to celebrate the achievements of women throughout history, acknowledge the ongoing struggles they face, and collectively work towards a more equitable and inclusive world for all.
